

OregonAEYC “Spectrum of Diversity in the Lives of Children”

Spectrum of Diversity: Men in the Lives of Children

A facilitated exploration of breaking down the barriers and stereotypes of fatherhood and men in the lives of children. We will examine the struggle that men face as they parent or work with young children. The afternoon will feature special guests from Homeboy Industries from Los Angeles, California, sharing their successes and challenges in working with those who are ready to move beyond gang involvement. The afternoon will conclude with action planning.

with Luis Giraldo. Luis has extensive experience working with Parents and Fathers in several capacities. Currently, Luis works at Homeboy Industries as the Curriculum Development Specialist. He facilitates parenting classes, fatherhood groups, and actively participates in the Baby and Me class. Luis completed a BA degree from Pacific Oaks College with an emphasis on Human Development and Social Change. He continued his education at UCLA completing a MA in Higher Education and Organizational Change. He is currently completing a PhD in Educational Studies with an emphasis on teaching, learning, and culture at Claremont Graduate University. As a father, Luis states his most treasured teachings and learning comes from his children that reinforces the theory and practice and warms the heart.
