Wednesday, February 3, 2016

6:30pm-8:00pm

Linfield College, Riley Campus Center, 201

The brain develops most rapidly in the first five years of life.

Are you an educator, medical provider, child care provider, or caregiver? New science tells us children's first five years are when they develop the foundation for all future learning.

Attend this event to hear local professionals discuss how you can support early brain development.

Dr. Jennifer Linder, professor of psychology at Linfield College, will present on the impact of screen time and violent media on early development.

Dr. Margaret Miller, pediatrician at Physician's Medical Center, will present on the impact of trauma on children's development and the importance of trauma informed care.

Dr. Sara Owens Woodard, licensed psychologist, will present on the importance of relationship and connection for healthy brain development.

There will be time at the end for questions and networking. Dessert and coffee provided.
